

World Book Day

On the 1st of March many people around the world celebrated World Book Day. World Book Day is a day to encourage children and adults to pick up a book and read. This year for the first time teenagers had a bigger chance of getting involved, because they could get a free app with their book tokens which had lots of chapters from famous books read by the authors who wrote them. This year's World Book Day is celebrating 15 years of reading. This year there have been 8 free books to get with your book tokens including Jacqueline Wilson with Big Day Out, Derek Landy with Skulduggery Pleasant and Martin Handford with Where's Wally Now? All these books were made especially for World Book Day. Mrs Davis our school librarian gave us a few comments on her view of World Book Day she said 'World Book Day is a time to pick up a book and read.' world book day is a day to celebrate books so anyone anywhere can enjoy reading. In our school this year we set up a guess the book stall in the library. What did you do this year?
